

THREE CONNELLVILLE BOYS MISSING SINCE FIRST DAY OF MARNE BATTLE; SIXTEEN SOMERSET COUNTIANS ALSO NOT ACCOUNTED FOR

MESSAGES RECEIVED AT SOMERSET THIS MORNING CARRY NEWS OF LOSSES

Captain W. C. Truxal and Lieutenant S. S. Crouse, Company C. Among Those Listed; One is From Machine Gun Company; Whether Dead or Prisoners is Unknown.

NO NEWS OF COMPANY D CASUALTIES AT HAND

Fifteen members of Company C, 110th Infantry, Somerset, and one of the Machine Gun company, have been missing since the opening battle of the Marne on July 15, according to messages received at Somerset this morning from the office of the adjutant general at Washington. They include Captain W. Curtis Truxal and Lieutenant S. S. Crouse.

Whether they are dead or prisoners of the Germans is unknown. Most of the boys are from Somerset. The complete list is:

Captain W. Curtis Truxal, Somerset.
Lieutenant S. S. Crouse, Somerset.
Private Robert Kemp, Somerset.
Private William Salkeld, Somerset.
Private Samuel Salkeld, Somerset.
Private Earl Wrick, Somerset.
Private Joseph Hartle, Somerset.
Private Leo Clark, Somerset.
A. Ward Coffey, Somerset.
Charles Yarnall, Somerset.

No casualty list affecting Company D or other companies of the region has been received. A letter from Dewey Miller, of the Medical Detachment, of the regiment, received here today, speaks of the loss of four men, but does not indicate whether it was in Company D or some other. He says some of the companies lost heavily in the opening day of the Germans' Marne offensive.

Captain Truxal is a brother of Miss Rebecca Truxal, a former teacher in the Connellsville schools.

Mrs. Clara Kemmerer of Republic, received a telegram this morning from Adjutant McClain informing her that her brother, Samuel F. Beaver was missing in action July 15th.

WOMEN CANVASSING CITY TO RECRUIT HOSPITAL NURSES

Work is Under Direction of Members of Women's Committee of Defense Council.

The Women's Committee of National Defense having been delegated to take charge of the campaign for recruiting nurses for the army and civilian hospitals the local committee, of which Mrs. C. E. Wilson is chairman, started a house to house canvass yesterday with the following women in charge of the different wards and boroughs.

Sixth and Seventh wards, Mrs. R. S. McKee; Fifth ward, Mrs. L. P. McCormick; Fourth ward, Mrs. T. R. Francis; Third ward, Mrs. D. E. Trober; Second ward, Mrs. John Davis; First ward, Mrs. C. E. Wilson; Vanderbilt, Mrs. G. B. Roberts; Dunbar, Mrs. L. S. Kerebner; South Connellsville, Mrs. Emmet Carson.

The total number of applicants received was not known at noon today but will be announced later in the week.

Last night Mrs. J. K. Kerr addressed the members of the Business Women's Christian association in the interest of the campaign and during the week Mrs. T. R. Francis, Mrs. G. W. Buckner and Dr. Katherine Wakefield will speak in the different theatres. Dr. Wakefield has consented to help any of the young women in filling out their application papers if they come to her office in East Crawford avenue Thursday, Friday or Saturday afternoons.

Owing to the fact that since the war began fewer women have gone into hospitals this campaign becomes a grave and very serious necessity.

CORN IN DEMAND

Wagon Loads of Roasting Ears at Market This Morning.

Twenty farmers were on hand at the opening of the curb market this morning and all were loaded down to their utmost capacity for the morning's rush. Sixteen came in wagons, four in automobiles. There was a large crowd of buyers all morning.

Corn seemed to be the dominating offer at the market. Many farmers brought whole wagon loads. The corn sold at 35 cents a dozen, while onions sold at 10 cents a pound and cabbage at five cents the pound. There was also a large supply of melons and apples.

LETTERS ARRIVING TODAY REVEAL FACT, BUT CENSOR BARS GIVING THE NAMES

That three Connellsville boys and one from Uniontown, undoubtedly members of the Medical Detachment, are missing since the opening day of the battle of the Marne, is indicated in letters received today from Charles A. McCormick of that organization of the 110th Regiment. A letter from James Darr, also of the Medical Detachment, also says four are missing. A letter from Dewey Miller tells of four of "our boys" being lost by being cut off during the first attack.

A graphic story of the battle is contained in the following letter from Darr to Kirk Dilworth:

"July 15, after we were out one year to the day and were wondering how we would celebrate the event the Germans started their big drive. It was pitch dark dark and raining like hell and all you could hear was shells, whistling and cracking. You know what some of those big ones are like. When they got too near our dressing station you should have seen us go. That happened just before day break. Deacon, it's hell. We ran into Struble and three others of our boys from another station, wet and covered with blood. You can tell "Topsy" (Miss Loreen Struble) that I saw her brother this morning. One side of his helmet was burned black where a German shot at him. I have him a pair of dry socks and we sat down to a big chew of tobacco.

"They got a bunch from our regiment and the officer can hardly hold the men back. Twenty-four fellows were out past us in the woods, and completely surrounded. They emptied a machine gun into the Huns but they kept on coming and after the gun got too hot to fire the boys jumped out to meet them. Do you know what happened? One hundred thirty-two Huns surrendered to 24 Yankees!

"Fear of our boys are not accounted for. We don't know a thing about them. Sorry I can't give their names."

A card received tells of the safety of Clifford Crowley, a member of the Medical Detachment.

First news from Connellsville boys of the 110th Regiment since the beginning of the battle of the Marne on July 15 is contained in a letter from Dewey Miller of the Medical Detachment to R. Vincent Rendine, written on July 19 and mailed the following day from the army post office.

"We have just finished our first mixup with old Fritz," he says, adding that there is a lull and that the boys are awaiting for developments. "Believe me, Jim, we did our part and did it right. In some companies we lost heavily, but as for Company D we have been very fortunate," he adds. He speaks of losing four but does not indicate whether they are of Company D or some other command.

His letter reads: "Just a few words in reply to your card of greeting. We have just finished our first mixup with old Fritz and you will see by the enclosed clipping who got the worst of it. He

COMPANY D BOYS IN FINE FETTER BEFORE BATTLE

Fact Made Known in Letter From Lloyd J. Shaw, Written June 27.

EXPERIENCES ARE TRYING

The Young Soldiers Have Had, Letter to C. Roy Hetzel Says, But All Are Upholding the Traditions of Keystone State, Lloyd Indicates.

Writing to C. Roy Hetzel under date of June 27, Lloyd J. Shaw, of the Medical Detachment of the 110th Regiment, says "all of the Connellsville boys are quite well at this time, although we all have seen some very hard and trying experiences, which only go to show that, true to its reputation, Pennsylvania can be counted upon to do her part."

"At this time," says the letter, "there is not one serious case of sickness among the officers and men of Company D and the Hospital Corps of Medical Detachment, as the Hospital Corps is now styled. We have not yet been put into real action but expect to be any day. The spirit manifests on the part of the boys is most wonderful, every one of them being anxious to do his part."

"We have not been able to locate any of the Connellsville boys of the other organizations but we understand that they are not very far from us. I anticipate there will be some time when we do meet."

"We are getting plenty to eat but bathing facilities here in France are not very good and we are always satisfied to find a bucket of water and get a sponge bath. If we are located long enough at one place we can sometimes heat the water. Otherwise a cold bath must suffice. The climate here is hot during the day and damp and cold at night but so far none of the boys has suffered any ill effects."

"We were glad to read The Courier which were sent to Lieutenant Dilworth, as these were the first papers the boys saw since leaving the States. We all would be glad to get the Connellsville papers as often as possible."

There is much that could be written, Lloyd says, but the censor will not permit.

LINES IN FLANDERS SHOWERED WITH GAS SHELLS

PARIS, Aug. 6.—North of the Vesle the Germans have been repulsed in efforts to dislodge French and American units which crossed from the south bank. The official statement from the war office today also reports a French advance to the Avre, north of Montdidier. Prisoners were taken by the French in the repulse of German raids southeast of Montdidier. The statement reads:

"North of Montdidier our troops have made progress toward the Avre which they have reached between Braches and Morizel. A German surprise attack southeast of Montdidier was checked completely. Prisoners remain in our hands."

A STRICT CENSORSHIP OVER DISTRIBUTION OF COKE MAY BE NECESSARY

Proposed Enlargement of Steel Plants and Increased Domestic Demands Making the Situation Acute.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—The United States Fuel Administration announced yesterday that a strict censorship would be necessary over the distribution of the nation's supplies of coke, the larger part of which is needed for the steel mills and other war industries.

Plans for the enlargement of the capacity of the steel mills is one of the factors which has made this step necessary. There has already been a shortage of supplies of coke at some of the mills.

The situation was made more acute by the increased demands for coke made by domestic consumers. A serious shortage of coke has been reduced by the new distribution plan of the Fuel Administration.

Weekly reports from all shippers of coke in carload lots for household use or for general distribution by retail dealers will hereafter be requested. The reports are to be sent by the shippers to the Federal Fuel Administration of each state to which such shipments have been made or are to be made.

LOCAL WAR NEWS

KIDS ALIKE THE WORLD

OVER, PRETTS INDICATES. Kids "Over There" are just like the kids at home, as may be judged by an excerpt from a letter by Eugene Prefts of Company C, 136th Machine Gun Battalion, with the American Expeditionary Forces, just where he does not say. The letter came to his mother, Mrs. D. D. Prefts. "The kids follow us about and jump on our trucks and ask us for cigarettes and pennies. Some of them sit along the road and sing our song, 'Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here,' he says.

In the introduction of his letter Eugene tells of a pleasant voyage over, with no indication that the submarines gave them any attention. Motion pictures provided by the Y. M. C. A. afford them entertainment throughout the trip. They were interested in the fish life which abounds in the ocean and spent much of their time watching the schools of funny denizens of the deep. He speaks of a ball game with the engineers which was lost by the latter. The National and American league scores are received regularly, he says. He has not seen either of his brothers, William and Charles, who are also in the service.

GEORGE PERCY DIXON

WOUNDED IN ACTION.
Official report that George Percy Dixon had been wounded in action in France was received last night by George Dixon of Oliver, in a telegram from the War Department. COMPANY D AND HOSPITAL

BOYS SEE BERLIN AHEAD
Writing to W. H. Solsson under date of June 20, Mr. Shaw says in part: "All the boys from Conneltsville are well and making the best of army life. Some things are very hard to bear at times but we are well fed and given as much attention as possible in these very stirring times. You will find from the accounts given in the papers that the Americans expect soon to be in Berlin. In fact, we all believe that the war will not last much longer if the present activities of the American boys is a criterion. I had the pleasure of seeing my first dead German this morning. I have seen plenty of live ones but I can say that the best and most honest-looking ones are the dead ones."

Mr. Solsson has relatives in the part of the region in which the 118th was located and Mr. Shaw expresses the intention of looking them up if the opportunity is afforded.

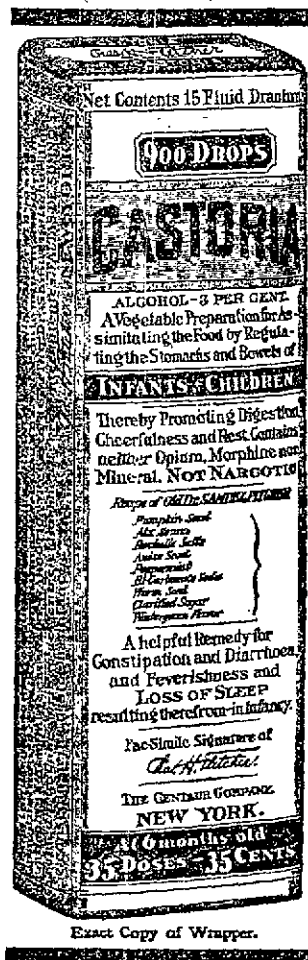

SWEETHEARTS NEED NOT

WORRY OVER FRENCH GIRLS
"Having a few minutes to spare, I wish to write to you and let you know the pleasure we have had in reading your paper. I had been living about Boudville for the last 19 years and never in my life were thoughts of my home town brought as when your paper arrived," says Corporal James Hay of the 102nd Bakery Company, with the United States forces in France, writing to a member of The Courier staff. "While reading, I traveled in spirit back to the places I used to visit. Believe me, The Daily Courier was a cure for sore eyes. And not only for me but for a number of others in my company."

"We have traveled extensively," the letter says, "stopping at one time in a barracks built by Napoleon and passing through some of the country made famous by Joan of Arc. I want to say a word to the American girls—those whose friends are doing their bit over here. Let them not worry about the boys meeting French beauties and not returning for the beauties are few and far between, and trying to understand their language is an awful task. Between the sign language and a lot of other things we do make them understand."

"The first American girl we saw here was at a Y. M. C. A. No one wanted for introductions. We just went, we nearly shook her arm off."

Hay says he believes he got in with the best fellows on earth when he was transferred to the bakery company. Hay was with the old Tenth on

Let's hope no more get killed and that we will kill all the Huns in Germany. The place underscored Conde-en-Brie, is where we last stayed before we came to the trenches. We are now entrenched back of Montmirail at which place we trapped the Huns.

"It surely was great to see our artillery blow to pieces the woods in which they (the Huns) were located. We went forward then to attack and the war was hardly a Hun war. They retired back over the mountains and when they went to cross the river (Marne) again our artillery blew up their bridges. Boys, then we did give them hell properly, and rounded up about 1,000."

"I only regret one thing we lost a lot more no more will have to be sacrificed."

"Jim, the people can well feel proud of what the old 28th Pennsylvania Division has done."

"We are all well and happy. There is a lull now and we don't know what's next but we hope Jerry learns soon he can't get the best of the Yanks."

"I have seen lots and will have lots to tell you about our time in Europe. You can just imagine the times we have when Darry cut my hair and I cut his with my medical scissors. I sure wish Old Jim could see this was the first time Darry made. Well Jim, anything to get along until we get home again, then you can cut my hair any way at all."

Miller enclosed a clipping of a Paris paper telling of the progress of the battle. It is to this which he refers in the letter.

The party was returning from Charleroi to Donaldson, crossing ahead of the street car.

WHY SHE BECAME CHRISTIAN

Religions of Orient Make Slaves of Women, Says a Japanese, and Rebelled.

"And how did you happen to become a Christian?" I asked Mame, Hirooka, a widely known Japanese, writes Tyler Dennett in Asia.

"I wanted women to be good and I wanted to help them to improve their lot," she replied tersely. "I found that I could not accomplish what I desired without religion. That conclusion sent me to study religion from the woman's point of view. I found that there is no hope for women in any of the religions of the Orient. They teach that from the cradle to the grave women are inferior to men. They regard women as evil. Confucian ethics, for example, teach that fools and women cannot be educated. A woman cannot be a heavenly creature. It teaches that it is better to see a snake than a woman, for the latter arouses passion."

"Japanese women have been so long oppressed by this kind of teaching that they no longer stop to ask why. They are afraid like slaves. They began to read the Bible. I did not like some parts of it any better than I like the religions of the East. I did not see why any woman should call her husband 'Lord and Master.' St. Paul made me very angry. He was an old bachelor; any one can see that. He didn't know much about women. But Peter? He was fine. He had a wife, he understood women. One can see that from his epistles."

"When I read the gospels I found that Jesus made no distinction between the sexes. I liked that. We are all women as well as men, children of God. I came to the conclusion that the only hope for the women of the Orient to attain their true position is through Christianity."

Greatest Desired Lady.

It would appear, from bits of the social gossip of her day, that Miss Burdette-Coutts' nearest approach to an occupation was refusing offers of marriage. It is stated in "Intimate Memoirs of Napoleon III." that the name of the "Princess of Adventure" was connected with hers; that she refused the duke of Wellington, and a score of lesser gentlemen.

For years the great heiress was the most glittering matrimonial prize in England, and when at last she consented to change her condition by marrying an American, a London club with struck a responsive chord by observing, "I don't blame Ashmole Bartlett for proposing to the baroness. I've done it myself. I regard it as a duty every Englishman owes to his family."—Youth's Companion.

Evidently Had Wrong Girl.

Bouncer was distinctly irritated when he bumped into somebody along the street, until he found that it was an old acquaintance of his.

"Hi! Just the fellow I want to see," he remarked. "I wanted to ask you whether you ever hear anything of Borem nowadays. Did he marry that girl he was so keen on?"

"No, I don't think so. In fact, I've heard that he's rather fond of going to her house and putting the gramophone on most of the evening, and every time his back is turned to put a fresh record on. Miss Gladey moves the hands of the clock on anywhere from ten minutes to a quarter of an hour."

MORE WORK AND WORKERS

Needed to Meet the Allotments for Red Cross Supplies.

At the union church services in the Baptist church Sunday T. J. Hooper, president of the Conneltsville branch of the Red Cross, made an appeal for more work and more workers in the several departments. He drew attention to the exceptionally large allotments of surgical dressings, hospital garments and supplies and other articles that have been assigned to the Conneltsville branch and urged that there be such a response that will make it possible to provide these supplies as needed. Conneltsville has never failed to meet its allotment but these have been increased so largely, because of the large increase in the number of our soldiers in France, that unusual effort and many more workers will be required to make and ship the supplies on schedule time.

Chairman Hooper not only urged the intermittent workers to greater diligence, but very cordially invited those who have not been active to come to the work rooms and have a part in this very necessary war activity. "The boys Over There have no hot weather vacations," said Mr. Hooper, "and we should not think of thinking one ourselves. If we do, some boy, maybe our own, may suffer for the very articles you could be making."

BOYS' BAND

Of Laysville Orphans' Home to Give Concert Here Tonight.

The Laysville Orphans' Home band arrived in the city this afternoon to give a concert in the high school auditorium this evening at 8 o'clock. This band, which has gained merited distinction as a musical organization in the central and eastern sections of the state, is composed of 36 boys ranging in age from 12 to 16 years, all members of the home in whose interests they are making a two weeks' tour under the direction of Prof. Clyde M. Stauffer.

The Laysville home was originally established in 1867 as a soldiers' orphan school. When it had served its purpose of caring for the children of Civil War veterans the property was acquired by the Lutherans and has since been conducted as an orphanage. Two hundred and fifty children are being cared for in the institution. The members of the band will be entertained at the homes of members of the congregation of Trinity church during their stay in Conneltsville. No admission will be charged at the concert but an offering in support of the home will be asked.

NAMED FOR PERSHING

American Commander in France Acknowledges Note of Local Patrons.

Mr. and Mrs. James Dull of Lancaster avenue received a letter yesterday from General John J. Pershing in acknowledgment of a letter he received from Mrs. Dull some time ago. Mrs. Dull had sent the American commander a birth card informing him that they had named their son Jack Pershing Dull in his honor.

General Pershing's letter came in a large envelope which had enclosed in it a smaller envelope bearing the name "Jack Pershing Dull" in the general's own hand writing. Inside of this envelope was his card. The letter was sent from the office of the commander-in-chief and was dated July 9.

SUGAR ALLOTMENT CUT STILL FURTHER

More Necessary in Order to Feed Our Boys Now on French Battlefields.

STRICT COMPLIANCE URGED

Grocers Must Keep Track of Sugar
Needs of Customers in Order to Insure an Equitable Distribution.

New Sugar Rules in Brief.
One-half pound per person per week is the new individual allotment for the home.
Retail grocers are notified that their August allotment will be lessened.
Two pounds for each 50 meals served is the new allotment for hotels, restaurants, clubs, etc.
Manufacturers using sugar in less essential industries will be further limited in their sugar allotments.
Sugar for canning and preserving will be available on certificate issued by the grocer.
Any person attempting to "beat the regulations" runs the risk of having to go without sugar entirely.
But Mr. Hoover believes public sentiment will stop the hoarder who is thus proving his willingness to help the hoarder.

"The retail grocer is hereby notified that his allotment of sugar for August will be lessened to amount and will be delivered in getting to him. Therefore he must make his present supply go as far as possible under his new ration of one-half pound per person per week."

Edward Helix, U. S. Food Administrator for Pennsylvania, made the above positive statement in connection with his vigorous comments on the new sugar regulations, rationing foodstuffs at the rate of one-half pound of sugar per person per week. Mr. Helix said:

"The U. S. Food Administration has now asked the American people voluntarily to ration these necessities of life to not more than one-half pound of sugar per person per week. This has become necessary in order that we may have sufficient sugar to supply our soldiers and to maintain the meagre sugar ration that our Allies have been drawing for the past few months."

No Doubt to Carry It.
"We are also so sure of home which have been carrying our sugar from Cuba that we cannot maintain a normal supply of sugar. I have no doubt that the American people will demonstrate that they are willing to comply with what ever is asked of them if it will help to win the war. This voluntary rationing will mean self-denial and sacrifice of what many have regarded as a luxury, but it certainly will not cause a feeling or effect the health of any one."

"The American people have stood nobly behind Mr. Hoover in his requests because he has been fair, reasonable and because they believe that he knows and is therefore in a position to make a correct judgment of the situation. They feel that they will be helped if they immediately see how many ways they can assist in saving sugar by the use of substitutes and by using less sugar in their cooking. In order to insure every person getting his one-half pound a week, everybody must be careful not to waste a single grain of sugar. The consuming public in full line and conform quickly and I cannot call to this new regulation."

THE FIREMEN HAVE PUT IT UP TO THE REST OF US.

The members of the executive committee of the Western Pennsylvania Firemen's association are to be commended for their cheerful compliance with the request of the Fuel Administration to cancel the annual convention scheduled to be held in Meyersdale next week.

The men comprising the governing body of this organization are well aware of the vital relation existing between the maximum production of coal and all those industries upon which the successful conduct of the war is based, hence they very readily comprehend the point of the objection of the Fuel Administration to any gathering that might result in the reduction in output of even a single ton of coal. With the same kind of spirit firemen as a class always show when a question of duty is involved, rather than personal interest or comfort to be served, they have normally called off the convention. They have done even more. They have set an example in patriotism many individuals might follow with profit to themselves and advantage to our country in the great emergency we are facing. They not only pledged themselves to accede to the request of the Fuel Administration in any way within their power and to give their "fullest measure in labor and to induce others to do likewise."

Such a spirit, when backed up by performance in accordance with its purpose, is going to make it possible for the boys in France to win the war quicker than most of us have believed to be possible. But they will not win quickly if we abate even the slightest in our determination to back them to the limit of our strength, resources and efforts. The firemen of Western Pennsylvania have set the pace in backing the boys. It is up to the rest of us to also give our "fullest measure in labor and to induce others to do likewise."

HOLDING MINERS TO THEIR JOB.
The decision of the Department of Labor and Federal Employment Service to make coal mining "wholly war work," thus giving it a new status in relation to the recruiting of unskilled labor, is the second step in the direction of a definite policy having for its object the retention of mine workers in that occupation. The first step was the decision of the War Department to prevent the enlistment of miners in the army.

Until these decisions were announced there had been a very general discussion of plans and methods for preventing a further depletion of mine working forces, but few of them advanced beyond the outline stage. With the prohibition placed upon the taking of men from the mines to other war industries, which is, in effect, the meaning of the definition of coal mining as "wholly war work," it is clearly established that men in this industry have certain restrictions thrown about them which will be the means of retaining many, if not all, in the ranks of this very essential force. Closing the army recruiting offices to men engaged in mining will have a similar effect.

While there is a positiveness in the instructions that have been issued it will be observed that there is no element of compulsion laid upon the men themselves. No attempt is made to draft the men to work in a particular industry but in the case of other industries they are denied the right to seek recruits among those engaged in coal mining. Any miner has the privilege of leaving his job, if he is without regard to the appeals of patriotism which urge him to stay in the ranks of the mine workers, and he can seek employment elsewhere of his own accord. Even in such cases no regulations or orders are at present in force by which he can be compelled to return to mine work. The object is to prevent him being drawn to other lines of employment and to retain his services for what is declared to be the most important of all the industries related to winning the war.

If the recommendation of Provost Marshal General Crowder, that the coal operators cooperate with the local boards in securing all the information necessary to guide the boards in giving deferred classification to mine workers, is acted upon, it would appear possible that the depletion of this class of essential workers would be made to cease, at least to the extent that existing regulations provide. These stop short of conscription of labor, which it has long been the purpose of the Washington authorities to avoid, but they place an emphasis upon the importance of the mine worker's occupation which should be very helpful in bringing them to understand that they should no more consider a suggestion of themselves or others to leave their work than the soldiers on the battlefields of Europe would consider a suggestion to leave their jobs.

Having given President DeBolt the once over a year ago the Western Pennsylvania association will be entirely satisfied to have him hold over until the next convention.

In the contest between Company D and Company C for scraps of the Hun, Corporal Martz of Gloucester, leader of 18 to 17. This is for the first time only. What it will be for the end of the game it is not safe to venture a guess.

The firemen have answered the alarm to help keep the factory fires burning just as promptly as they would answer an alarm to keep the factories from burning.

By stopping Sunday sales of gasoline on a mistaken order the automobile associations appear to have been more patriotic than the Fuel Administration asked them to be. Safety Pig is as good in patriotism as well as in the automobile business.

With experts in charge of standing the Red Cross carnival it can be counted upon as an assured success.

The Prussians asked for no quarter during the desperate hand-to-hand fighting at Ploem. The ever obliging Americans saw to it that the Hunns were accommodated.

The receipt of the larger casualty list with the text of the course of the fight over there. It must be met just as heroically as the boys over there have met the same test. If we would measure up to the faith the boys have in us.

As further acknowledgment of their defeat in the Marne campaign the Hunns have sunk another hospital ship carrying wounded soldiers.

If under the extension of the draft the 45-ers are not equal to completing the job of kicking the Kaiser, the boys from 48 to 50 can be depended on to come to their rescue.

The German army is having rather strenuous rehearsals just now for the final drive toward home.

Emperor Charles of Austria "can't" the general who lost the battle of the Marne. What will Kaiser Bill do with the crown prince for losing the second battle of the Marne? Give him another iron cross?

Automobiles ought never to tire of helping the Red Cross, which they can do every time they re-tire their machines.

Letters That Harm More Than They Help

American women have been writing to their soldier sons serving in France with more affection than good judgment, according to reports that come back from time to time. Too often the letters contain expressions of anxiety and grief. Small worries, also, are borne across seas and large troubles are frequently shared with the boys away from home.

"If our mothers would not worry it would be better for them and better for us," is the cry of hundreds of our boys in the hospitals of Europe," said Mrs. Edward Vickers, of Boston, who has returned to the United States after passing three years in war work in England and France.

"Men with amputations staring them in the face, will say this again and again," declared Mrs. Vickers. "The mother comes first at the vital moment and the main anxiety is that she may not suffer. When a boy is lying in a hospital cot, every other sentence contains the words, 'my mother,' or 'my wife,' or 'my girl,' and very often 'my pay.'"

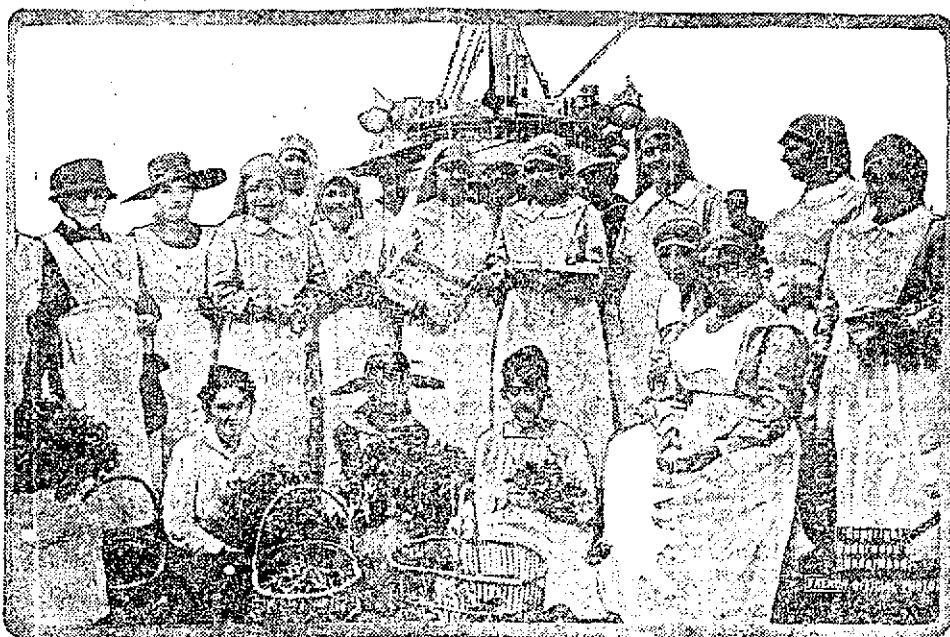

"And I would like to tell the girls of this country that men abroad regard their girl friends as men in accordance with the standard which the girls have set for themselves. That the girls they have left behind are worth fighting for is a sustaining thought that comforts the boys as they fight and when they must suffer and die.

"Let all the letters from home be as bright and as new as possible. Also, do not forget to tell the boys what the home folks are doing to keep up their end of the war. They want to hear good reports about the Red Cross, the Liberty loan and the War Savings Stamp drives. If a letter is cheerful and hopeful a man will tell the good news to his comrades. If it is depressing he will take it away and read it by himself in some quiet corner and its influence is more far-reaching than the writer could ever have imagined it might be. So please tell every one at home to write cheerful letters to their boys 'over there.'"

WARTIME PIES.

The wartime pie is a disaster. It is a disaster because it is made of plaster, the filling is sweetened slightly for sugar must be handled lightly. I eat my pie of peach or cherry, of apricot or lemonberry, and in the eating find no pleasure, but rather anguish, with out measure. It takes as though the peach or cherry were doped by an apothecary. How long I ask, while I am eating, will armies on red fields of meeting? How long will cottons and commanders, and all potent Alexanders across the battle field go scouring? Because of them we are devouring tough pies which look like iron wafers, and set our teeth on brittle edges. Because some kings and kindred generals were stuck on lining up as Cheaters, we are consuming pies of leather, all elevated and glued together. Because the Kaiser had a vision, a dream which seemed to him elysian, a dream of German flags a-float where human skulls are setting from far Calvary to Afghanistan, from Cork to Omaha, Nebraska, we're eating pies which break our jaw-bones and send us waiting to the sawbones. The grip of war our souls is pinching; we're brave and strong, but not unflinching; some burdens are too sore and grievous to bear without a sigh, believe us. We miss the pies that we made up, and who, I ask you, shall upbraid us?

THE WORKINGMAN'S PRAYER.

No use boasting of their courage, no use sitting down content.
Sort of fearful like an' trustin' to the soldiers that we've sent;
They're the finest youth that ever wore a country's uniform.
An' they ain't afraid of numbers or of any German swarm.
But it's up to us to hustle, for they'll never let the Hun—
It's tough thinking, different—
If they haven't got the guns.

We can brag about their mettle, for we know their mental angst.
But it's up to us to help 'em every minute nowadays.
Every ship that's going over must be loaded down with freight.
An' I pray to the each cargo won't get so jammed just too late.
They are lads that smile at danger, an' they've got the grit that tells:
But they'll never let the Kaiser if we don't provide the shells.

There's no Prussian aviator that can beat a Yankee lad;
We've got stuff in fancy flying that the Germans never had.
But the Beche will keep on flyin' an' he never will be downed.
By the Yankee aviator that is kept upon the ground.
We've got cloud men there in numbers that can beat their crews wings.
But we've got to send them motors an' we've got to send them wings.
Lord, I wish you'd give me language that would rouse my fellow man,
So that I could make him hustle in the way I know he can.
I ain't been long on prayin', but I'm comin' now to You,
Wantin' words to set men doin' what they know they ought to do.
Lord, the boys in France are waitin' while we're turnin' out the stuff.
Can't you speed us up a little so we'll make it fast enough?

NEWS OF THE DAY AT MT. PLEASANT BRIEFLY RELATED

Council Discusses Water Plant in Executive Session.

MUCH LAND HAS BEEN OPTIONED

Council is instructed to secure estimates on cost of Municipal Plant and when data is assembled Mass Meeting will be held; Notes.

Special to The Courier.

MT. PLEASANT, Aug. 6.—At an executive session of council last night following the disposition of regular business it was decided by the council by a vote of eight to one to proceed toward acquiring a municipal water plant. The best legal talent available will be secured. The committee delegated to look after a site for a plant reported having optioned all the necessary land from Lovinger's to Laurelville and in that territory where artesian wells are to be located. The last of the options was secured yesterday.

Estimates on the cost of a municipal plant are to be secured together with other data. When all is assembled a public mass meeting will be called for thorough discussion of the problem. It is expected bonds will be floated if it is decided finally to have a town plant. There will be a liberal demand at home for the bonds, it is indicated. It is said one man has expressed the wish to invest $50,000.

Complaints were made concerning sewers and streets. Charles Rumbaugh asked that if council grants the West Penn a new light franchise to not grant one unless the company gives electric light to all persons in the borough. He said the company had refused him light. Council ordered the burgess to notify people whose sidewalks were in bad condition that they must relay them immediately. The burgess reported snowing collections of $211 was received and placed on file.

POLICE OFFICER MONROE TALKS

Grateful to Thank for Wonderful Improvement in His Health.

Officer W. S. Monroe, who lives at 1731 Sixth St., Harrisburg, and is so popular among visitors to the park, said:

"My stomach had gone back on me entirely. I was constipated and my kidneys troubled me greatly.

"I had no appetite, my food didn't digest well and I lacked energy. I felt tired and dispirited all the time as though something unpleasant was going to happen. Nervousness, I guess.

"One day when I was down town I happened to talk with the Tanlac man and he told me of a number of cases similar to mine where the people, many of them right here in Harrisburg, had been cured by Tanlac. I bought a bottle and started taking it. Well, sir, you can believe me or not but the very first doses did me good. I could feel it sort of working around inside of me hunting out the trouble and before I had finished the first bottle I felt a hundred per cent better.

"Now I eat with a relish, my stomach is in fine shape and these bad headaches I used to suffer with have left me entirely and I can only thank Tanlac."

Tanlac can now be had at Connelleville Drug Co.

Tanlac can also be secured at Duobor at D. C. Eason's Drug Store.—Adv.

At the Theatres

THE PARAMOUNT.

"TO HELL WITH THE KAISER." A great screen classic of seven acts, showing the final destination of the mad monarch, as well as relating his cruel deeds on earth, is being shown today. A great cast headed by Olive Tell and Laurence Grant, has been chosen to interpret this magnificent picture, which has been directed by George Irving from the scenario by June Mathis. Laurence Grant plays the Kaiser, Olive Tell, a beautiful star of both stage and screen, plays the leading feminine part of Alice Monroe. Betty Howe does a wonderful bit of work as her sister, Ruth, who meets a tragic fate in a Belgian convent at the hands of the Crown Prince. The picture has some of the most unusual features ever seen in a photodrama. The closing scenes contain a genuine surprise combining beauty and forcefulness and is Kaiser is shown in the accused regions to which his true record has destined him. Scenes among the American soldiers in trenches are shown and a general air battle of two opposing aerial fleets is reproduced. Romance plays its part in the amazing picture, showing that love and loyalty will outlive a thousand wars. A selected comedy is also being shown. Wednesday "The Deciding Kiss," a five Bluebird feature, will be shown. Friday, Evelyn Greeley and Carlyle Blackwell, supported by Madge Evans and John Hines, in the leading roles, will be presented.

ARCADE THEATRE.

This week's show at the Arcade opened to a fair sized house Monday afternoon and was received well. Although the show did not run the usual time, it went over well and the chorus especially worked hard. The comedians succeeded in getting laughs at times. The show will be repeated again today. An added attraction for the first three days are the Australian Serenaders, direct from the west where these artists enjoyed unusual popularity. Miss Love, the lady member of the duo, has one of the best voices ever heard at the Arcade. Helen Holmes thrills as usual on the screen with her daring. Wednesday and Thursday will be seen Helen Nova in "The Woman and the Web."

ORPHEUM THEATRE.

"MILKS." Today Mary Pickford will be shown again in "MILKS," an Arterial production and tomorrow George Dehan will be seen in "Jules of the Strong Heart," in which he has created still another Latin role in Jules, a rollicking, laughing, heroic figure of a man. Jules, carrying a wee baby on his back, comes singing down into the Connelleville camp where most of the scenes are laid.

TELLS HOW TO GET BACK OLD TIME AMBITION

Discoverer instructs druggists everywhere not to take a cent of anyone's money unless Bio-feren doubles energy, vigor and nerve force in two weeks.

7 A DAY FOR 7 DAYS

Many men or women who find that they are going backward, are not as strong as they used to be, have lost confidence in their ability to accomplish things, are nervous and run down should take two Bio-feren tablets after each meal and one at bedtime. Then take one after each meal until the supply is exhausted. If you are nervous and not gone, energetic as before, if your sluggish disposition has not been changed to a vigorous active one, take back the empty package and your money will be returned without comment.

No matter what causes, worry, overwork—too much tobacco or alcohol—have weakened your body and wrecked your nerves, any druggist anywhere is authorized to refund your money on request if Bio-feren, the mighty builder of blood, muscle and brain does not do just what is claimed for it.

Note to Physicians: There is no secret about the formula of Bio-feren. It is printed on every package. Here it is: Leithin; Calcium Glycero-phosphate; Iron Pyrophosphate; Manganese Pyrophosphate; Ext. Nux Vomica; Potash; Phosphoric Acid; Glycerin; Capellin; Kola.

Will stand an immense amount of work. But the trouble is that not many eyes are sound. Scarcely one person in ten has perfect vision. And probably seven in ten would improve their physical condition greatly by wearing correct glasses. The correct glasses are what we furnish our patients with.

A Pretty Frock of French Flannel for Cool Mornings—Collar Facing and Piping of White Cloth

Dotted Swiss and Tinted Organdy So Pretty It Should Have Been Thought Of Before—Every Small Boy
a Sailor or a Soldier—Pockets a Conspicuous

LITTLE MAIDS of two to ten years are beautifully dressed this summer. Their distinctive costumes are extremely simple—even to the point of plainness, fussiness is eliminated, but graceful lines, soft, fine materials and touches of hand needle work accomplish infinite distinction.

French knots, feathers-itching, hemstitching, smocking, hand-run pin-tucks and other features of hand work make the little dresses as dainty as mother's love to have them and though grown-up women hesitate about shortening sleeves which have reached to the wrist for several seasons now, little girls are enjoying the privilege of cool, comfy elbow sleeves. Few frocks for wee girls this season have sleeves to the wrist.

French Flannel For Cool Mornings

The fine, striped flannels are liked for morning dresses to be worn at the mountains or the seashore during August and September. Such a costume does not require a sweater or jacket over it, as a flannel or chambray frock does. When the temperature rises to midsummer heat in the afternoon, a thinner frock may be changed. A smart little frock of white French flannel striped in pale green, is pictured. Pippings, collar, pocket-facings and buttons are white, and the white socks have green border trimming. The yoke and panel, with belt buttoning to the panel at either side, and the large pockets, set on so that they bulge slightly outward from the skirt, are in notably good style. In pale blue and white the flannel frocks are particularly pretty, and there are tan and white striped flannels which look well on brown-eyed little maids, in company with brown-topped socks and tan shoes.

Voile Frocks in Dainty Models

Not so many little girls as one might fancy are wearing gingham dresses this summer. Women have usurped the gingham this season and gingham prices have risen so appallingly that this material is not chosen for rough and ready play costumes for children. It belongs to the dress-up class of fabrics, like silk and satin. But voile is much liked for children's frocks and many of the little voile models are enchanting. Of course, the daintier patterns are selected for small girlhood and the floral effects seem to have most favor. A very pretty frock for a girl of seven is of blue and white voile with bands of white voile hemstitched in blue on the skirt, simulating tucks. The broad sash of plaid voile is lined with white and the waist turns back in revers to show a chemise of white voile smocked in blue. Another voile frock in pink and white check has a pin-tucked waist and box pleated skirt joined under a wide belt that fastens with an oblique row of white buttons. Large collar and elbow cuffs are of white organdy, scalloped and trimmed with organdy frilling. A neck bow and streaming ends of narrow black velvet add telling smartness to the pink and white frock.

An example of how delightful a voile frock can be for childhood is shown in the quaint, short-waisted costume accompanied by a poke bonnet of blue and white organdy, and by frilly organdy pants. Such a picturesque costume is surely only for a little maid with curls. The curls fit the old-timey of the picture and carry out the quaint suggestion of the panel and poke bonnet as a modern hatted costume of childhood would never do. Ankle-strap slippers give the proper effect with this costume and the little maid carries an appropriate nosegay bunched together in a ball of lace paper. The voile frock is flowered with big and little pink roses arranged in stripes, and the corded yoke and waistline are in keeping with the style of the costume. One more voile before this fascinating fabric for childhood is abandoned; a white voile pin dotted in blue and fashioned for a little girl of seven. The button-back waist is perfectly flat and plain and is attached to the skirt by a corded seam, the waistline being set above normal. The skirt is box pleated at front and back and three tucks run around the sides from box pleat to box pleat. A square yoke-collar of white organdy, scalloped and piped in blue, buttons in back like the bodice and the buttons are blue, on both collar and bodice. Wide, turned back cuffs of the organdy have blue buttons also.

Kiltie Suits For Autumn

The wee girl who travels to town with her mamma, for a day's shopping, these days, is going to thrill

the summer colony upon her return with a brand new kiltie costume, the very latest thing and an advance fall model, just out. There is a very, very short skirt of pleated blue serge escaping dimpled knees by several inches, and very, very tall socks with Scotch plaid rolled-down tops come up an equal distance below the knee. An abbreviated jacket of blue serge has a row of white buttons and button-holes down the front, but the jacket is not supposed to be worn buttoned. Instead it falls open to reveal a Scotch plaid waist of bright taffeta silk and a sash of the taffeta, twisted round the waist and tied at one side, shows under the very short jacket. The sleeves fit rather tight, and have turned back, flaring cuffs of mild taffeta. A gingery hat of serge with streamers of plaid ribbon accompanies this ravishing fall costume for a six-year-old. Speaking of gingery, they are immensely smart this summer for little girls. The best models are of fine, supple milan straw in shiny, black or cream white, with hand and streamers of grosgrain ribbon and a knowing bow of the ribbon on one side of the crown.

Dotted Swiss And Tinted Organdy

Why were dotted Swiss dresses never trimmed with colored organdy collars before—the effect is so charming? Some of the dainty dotted Swiss frocks for children have more than collars of tinted organdy; for instance, a frock with bands of pale yellow organdy set into the skirt with hemstitching and a little yellow organdy yoke that runs down at either side and frames the armholes. A dainty dress pictured is of fine dotted Swiss with a round collar of rose pink organdy, frilled at the edge. The narrow belt of the frock, and the half-moon pockets are outlined in rose pink French knots. This baby-girl wears a captivating hat with a dotted Swiss crown and frayed organdy falls that tumble over her eyes. Around the crown is a band of rose pink organdy embroidered in white.

The other little frock in this picture is equally fetching though it is a less expensive model, made of white lawn with featherstitching in apple green on the yoke and pockets. And mind the pockets, please! Any little girl may well consider herself defrauded this summer if mother forgets to put pockets on the frock made at home. All the tricksy models that come from the shops have enchanting pockets—even the sheer organdy frocks for afternoon wear.

INTERLINED SILK COATS CON-SERVE WOOL FOR WINTER

SOME VERY good looking new fall coats have not a thread of wool in their outer fabric. They are made of heavy satin and are lined with bright colored, soft satin of equally substantial quality. Between the outer and inner satin surfaces is a warm interlining, sometimes of flannel, sometimes of cotton batting. The lines of these coats are loose and graceful and sometimes a fur collar adds to the comfort and smartness.

MAKING SHANKLESS BUTTONS USABLE

THE CLOTH SHANKS of covered button moulds frequently pull out with disastrous consequences, for one is not likely to possess duplicates of such buttons when a coat or suit has been bought ready-made, and it is impossible to obtain even a supply of cloth from any portion of a modern economically cut garment for the making of fresh buttons. Some women sew the shankless button flat over its buttonhole and add an invisible snap beneath to effect the fastening; but there is a way to make the shankless button retain its hold on the material in such a way that it may be buttoned and unbuttoned. With a double strand of darning cotton of shade similar to the material covering the button, work a pattern of thread across the back, making tiny stitches at the edge of the button and carrying each thread straight across the darning. When you have worked all around the button in this way you will have many strands of the cotton, all crossing each other at a point in the center. Now start at the center, wearing the darning needle in and out, under and over the radiating threads, and keeping the woven stitches very close to each other as your disc of solid weaving extends outward. THE ULTRA SMART suit for young women, this autumn, is going to be severely plain, and quite distinctly mannish; a trim, unbelted coat without pockets and with narrow notched collar—no extra material anywhere, certainly not in the straight, narrow skirt that falls just over the top of the walking boot. There is a military trimness about these plain, beautifully tailored suits, that appeals to the busy girl, flying about on war-work business most of the day.

the summer colony upon her return with a brand new kiltie costume, the very latest thing and an advance fall model, just out. There is a very, very short skirt of pleated blue serge escaping dimpled knees by several inches, and very, very tall socks with Scotch plaid rolled-down tops come up an equal distance below the knee. An abbreviated jacket of blue serge has a row of white buttons and button-holes down the front, but the jacket is not supposed to be worn buttoned. Instead it falls open to reveal a Scotch plaid waist of bright taffeta silk and a sash of the taffeta, twisted round the waist and tied at one side, shows under the very short jacket. The sleeves fit rather tight, and have turned back, flaring cuffs of mild taffeta. A gingery hat of serge with streamers of plaid ribbon accompanies this ravishing fall costume for a six-year-old. Speaking of gingery, they are immensely smart this summer for little girls. The best models are of fine, supple milan straw in shiny, black or cream white, with hand and streamers of grosgrain ribbon and a knowing bow of the ribbon on one side of the crown.

Dotted Swiss And Tinted Organdy

ing? Some of the dainty dotted Swiss frocks for children have more than collars of tinted organdy; for instance, a frock with bands of pale yellow organdy set into the skirt with hemstitching and a little yellow organdy yoke that runs down at either side and frames the armholes. A dainty dress pictured is of fine dotted Swiss with a round collar of rose pink organdy, frilled at the edge. The narrow belt of the frock, and the half-moon pockets are outlined in rose pink French knots. This baby-girl wears a captivating hat with a dotted Swiss crown and frayed organdy falls that tumble over her eyes. Around the crown is a band of rose pink organdy embroidered in white.

The other little frock in this picture is equally fetching though it is a less expensive model, made of white lawn with featherstitching in apple green on the yoke and pockets. And mind the pockets, please! Any little girl may well consider herself defrauded this summer if mother forgets to put pockets on the frock made at home. All the tricksy models that come from the shops have enchanting pockets—even the sheer organdy frocks for afternoon wear.

INTERLINED SILK COATS CON-SERVE WOOL FOR WINTER

SOME VERY good looking new fall coats have not a thread of wool in their outer fabric. They are made of heavy satin and are lined with bright colored, soft satin of equally substantial quality. Between the outer and inner satin surfaces is a warm interlining, sometimes of flannel, sometimes of cotton batting. The lines of these coats are loose and graceful and sometimes a fur collar adds to the comfort and smartness.

MAKING SHANKLESS BUTTONS USABLE

THE CLOTH SHANKS of covered button moulds frequently pull out with disastrous consequences, for one is not likely to possess duplicates of such buttons when a coat or suit has been bought ready-made, and it is impossible to obtain even a supply of cloth from any portion of a modern economically cut garment for the making of fresh buttons. Some women sew the shankless button flat over its buttonhole and add an invisible snap beneath to effect the fastening; but there is a way to make the shankless button retain its hold on the material in such a way that it may be buttoned and unbuttoned. With a double strand of darning cotton of shade similar to the material covering the button, work a pattern of thread across the back, making tiny stitches at the edge of the button and carrying each thread straight across the darning. When you have worked all around the button in this way you will have many strands of the cotton, all crossing each other at a point in the center. Now start at the center, wearing the darning needle in and out, under and over the radiating threads, and keeping the woven

Dehydrated Foods Interest Housekeepers

DEHYDRATION is the process of removing water from vegetables and fruits, and virtually all vegetables and fruits can be dehydrated and made to keep indefinitely. The products are thoroughly dried by hot air before being used they must be soaked again in water and the experts of this dehydrating process claim that there is no loss of taste, color or flavor in foods so treated.

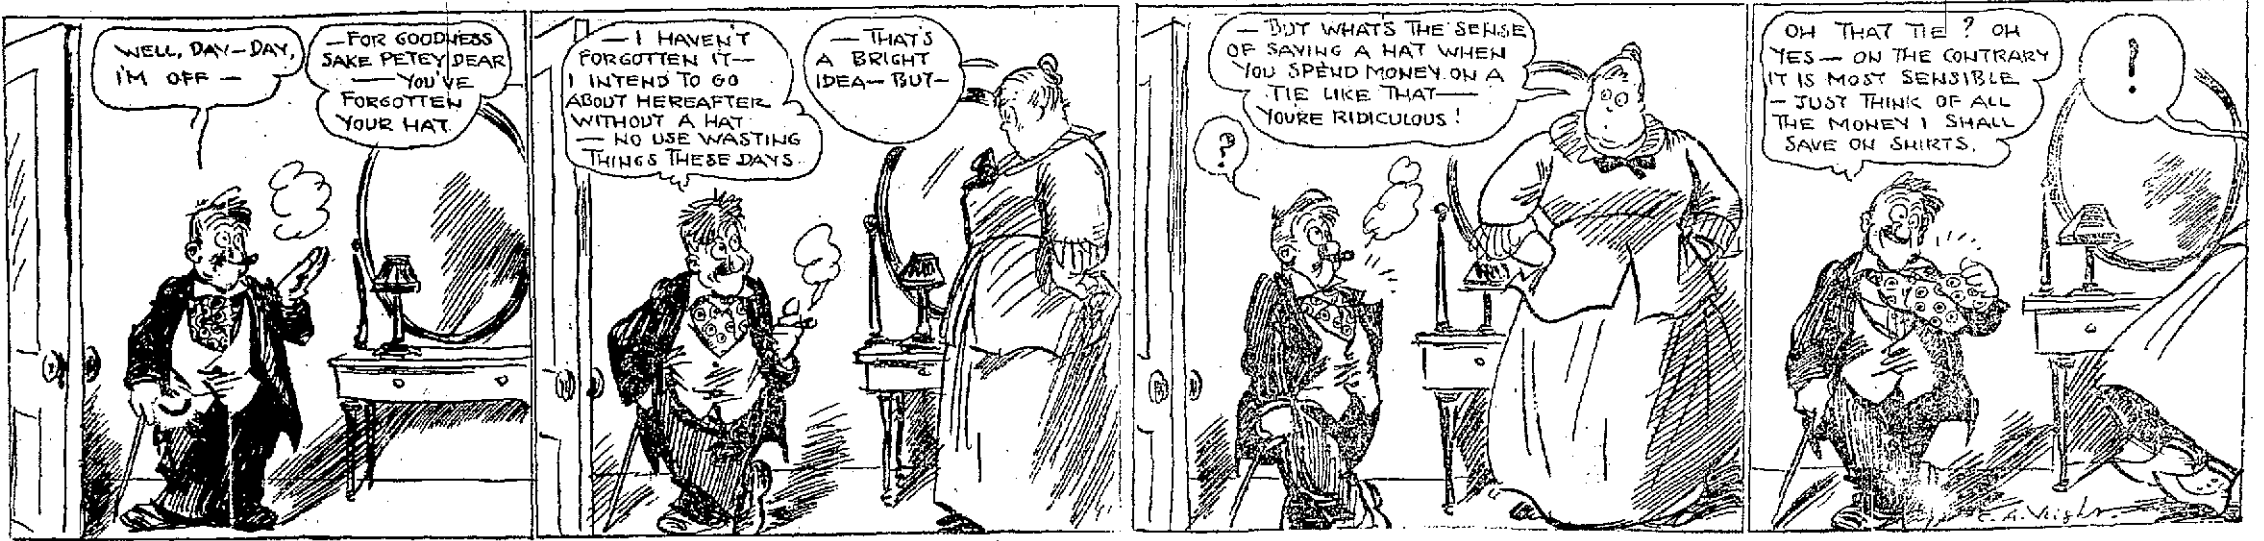

It is said that if the war goes on much longer a large percentage of dehydrated food must be eaten or the world will go hungry. During the Civil War in the states the preservation of food in tin cans began to be an enormous industry; the present war is likely to develop the process of dehydration and establish the merits of this method of food conservation in large quantities.

A recent exhibit of dehydrated foods at the National League for Women's Service aroused much interest and was most instructive to many women who attended. By this new method of preserving food every scrap—even waste—may be saved and utilized. For instance, garbage is dried and ground

PETEY DINK—What if Petey Ever Loses His Vest?

By C. A. VOIGHT

Carolyn of the Corners

By RUTH BELMORE ENDICOTT

CHAPTER VII.

A Sunday Walk.

Really if Prince had been a vain dog his ego would certainly have become unduly developed because of this incident. The Corners, as a community, voted him an acquisition, whereas heretofore he had been looked upon as a good deal of a nuisance.

After she recovered from her fright Miss Minnie walked home with Carolyn May and allowed Prince's delighted little mistress to encourage the "hero" to "shake hands with teacher."

"Now, you see, he's acquainted with you, Miss Minnie," said Carolyn May. "He's an awful nice dog. You didn't know just how nice he was before."

Almost everybody went to church and all the children to Sunday school, which was held first.

The Rev. Arden Driggs, though serious-minded, was a loving man. He was fond of children and he and his childless wife gave much of their attention to the Sunday school. Mrs. Driggs taught Carolyn May's class of little girls. Mrs. Driggs did her very best, too, to get the children to stay to the preaching service, but Carolyn May had to confess that the pastor's discourses were usually hard to understand.

"And he is always reading about the 'Betrans,'" she complained gently to Uncle Joe as they went home together on this particular Sunday, "and I can't keep interested when he does that. I suppose the 'Betrans' were very nice people, but I'm sure they weren't related to us—they've all got such funny names."

"Hum!" ejaculated Uncle Joe, smothering a desire to laugh. "Flow gently, sweet Arden, does select his passages of Scripture mostly from the 'valleys of dry bones.' I allow. You've got it about right there, Carolyn May."

"Uncle Joe," said the little girl, taking her courage in both hands, "will you do something for me?" Then, as he stared down at her from under his bushy brows, she added: "I don't mean that you aren't always doing something for me—letting me sleep here at your house and eat with you and all that. But something special."

"What is the 'something special'?" asked Mr. Staggs cautiously.

"Something I want you to do to-day. You always go off to your store after dinner and when you come home it's too dark."

"Too dark for what?"

"For us to take a walk," said the little girl very earnestly. "Oh, Uncle Joe, you don't know how dreadful I miss taking Sunday walks with my papa! Of course we took 'em in the morning, for he had to go to work on the paper in the afternoon, but we did just about go everywhere. If you would go with me, just this afternoon, seems to me I wouldn't feel so—so empty."

"Humph!" said Uncle Joe, clearing his throat. "If it's going to do you any particular good, Carolyn May, I suppose I can take a walk with you."

It was a crisp day—one of those autumn days when the tang of frost remains in the air, in spite of all the efforts of the sun to warm it.

Here and there they stopped to pick up the glossy brown chestnuts that had burst from their burrs. That is, Carolyn May and her uncle did. Prince, after a single attempt to nose one of the prickly burrs, left them strictly alone.

"You might just as well try to eat Aunt Rose's strawberry needle-cushion, Prince," the little girl said wisely. "You'll have a sorer nose than Amos Bartlett had when he tried to file it down with a wood rasp."

"Hum!" ejaculated Mr. Staggs. "Whatever possessed that Bartlett child to do such a fool trick?"

"Why, you know his nose is awfully big," said Carolyn May. "And his mother is always worried about it. She must have worried Amos, too, for one day last week he went over to Mr. Parlow's shop, borrowed a wood rasp and tried to file his nose down to a proper size. And now he has to go with his nose all grown and shiny like the new skin gourd back on it."

"Bless me, what these kids will do!" cried Mr. Staggs.

It was just at that moment that the little girl and the man, becoming really good comrades on this walk, met with an adventure. At least to Carolyn May it was a real adventure and one she was not to forget for a long, long time.

Prince suddenly bounded away, barking down a pleasant glade, through the bottom of which flowed a brook. Carolyn May caught a glimpse of something brown moving down there and she called shrilly to the dog to come back.

"But that's somebody, Uncle Joe," Carolyn May said with assurance, as the dog slowly returned. "Prince never barks like that unless it's a person. And I saw something move."

"Somebody taking a walk, like us. Couldn't be a deer," said Mr. Staggs. "Oh," cried Carolyn May later, "I see it again. That's a skirt I see. Why, it's a lady!"

Mr. Staggs suddenly grew very stern-looking, as well as silent. All the beauty of the day and of the glade they had entered seemed lost on him. He went on stubbornly, yet as though loath to proceed.

"Why," murmured Carolyn May, "it's Miss Amanda Parlow! That's who it is!"

The carpenter's daughter was sitting on a bare brown log by the brook. She was dressed very prettily, all in brown.

Carolyn May wanted awfully to speak to Miss Amanda. The brown lady with the pretty roses in her cheeks sat on a log by the brook, her face turned from the path Joseph Staggs and his little niece were coming along.

And Uncle Joe was quite stubborn. He stared straight ahead down the path without letting the figure on the log get into the focus of his vision.

Hanging to Uncle Joe's hand but looking longingly at the silent figure on the log, Carolyn May was going down to the stepping stones by which they were to cross the brook, when suddenly Prince came to a halt right at the upper end of the log and his body stiffened.

"What is it, Prince?" whispered his little mistress. "Come here."

But the dog did not move. He even growled—not at Miss Amanda, of course, but at something on the log. And it was just then that Carolyn May wanted to scream—and she could not!

For there on the log, raising its flat, wicked head out of an aperture, was a snake, a horrid, silent, writhing creature, the look of which held the little girl horror-stricken and speechless.

Uncle Joe glanced down impatiently, to see what made her hold back so. The child's feet seemed glued to the earth. She could not take another step.

Writing out of the hole in the log and coiling, as it did so, into an attitude to strike, the snake looked to be dangerous indeed. The fact that it was only a large blacksnake and non-poisonous made no difference at that moment to the dog or to the little girl—nor to Joseph Staggs when he saw it.

It was called right at Miss Amanda's back. She did not see it, for she was quite as intent upon keeping her face turned from Mr. Staggs as he had been determined to ignore her presence.

Carolyn May was shaking and helpless. Not so Prince. He repeated his challenging growl and then sprang at the writhing head. Miss Amanda uttered a stifled scream and jumped up from the log, whirling to see what was happening behind her.

Joseph Staggs dropped Carolyn May's hand and leaped forward with his walking stick raised to strike. But Leaped Forward With His Walking Stick to Strike.

The mongrel dog was there first. He wisely caught the blacksnake behind the head, his strong, sharp teeth severing its vertebrae.

"Good dog!" shouted Mr. Staggs excitedly. "Fine dog!"

"Oh, Miss Amanda!" shrieked Carolyn May. "I—I thought he was going to sting you—I did!"

She ran to the startled woman and clung to her hand. Prince nosed the dead snake. Mr. Staggs looked exceedingly foolish. Miss Amanda recovered her color and her voice simultaneously.

"What a brave dog yours is, little girl," she said to Carolyn May. "And I do so despise snakes!" Then she looked directly at Mr. Staggs and bowed gravely. "I thank you," she said, but so coldly, so Carolyn May thought, that her voice might have come "just off an iceberg."

"Oh, I didn't do anything—really I didn't," stammered the man. "It was the dog."

Both looked very uncomfortable. Joseph Staggs began to pick up the scattered chestnuts from the overturned basket. The lady stooped and whispered to Carolyn May:

"Come to see me, my dear. I want to know you better."

Then she kissed Carolyn May and slipped quietly away from the brook, disappearing quickly in the undergrowth.

Joseph Staggs and the little girl went on across the stepping stones, while Prince splashed through the water. Carolyn May was thinking about Miss Amanda Parlow and she believed her Uncle Joe was, too.

"Uncle Joe," she said, "would that had old snake have stung Miss Amanda?"

"Hum? No; I reckon not," admitted Mr. Staggs absent-mindedly. "Blacksnakes don't bite. A big one like that can squeeze some."

"But you were scared of it—like me and Prince. And for Miss Amanda," said Carolyn May very much in earnest.

"I guess 'most everybody is scared by the sight of a snake, Carolyn May," said Mr. Staggs. "But you were scared for Miss Amanda's sake—just the same as I was," repeated the little girl decidedly.

"Well," he growled, looking away, troubled by her insistence.

"Then you don't hate her, do you?" the child pursued. "I'm glad of that, Uncle Joe. For I like her very much. I think she's a beautiful lady."

To this Uncle Joe said nothing.

"I guess," thought Carolyn May wisely, "that when two folks love each other and get angry the love's there just the same. Getting mad doesn't kill it; it only makes 'em feel worse."

"Poor Uncle Joe! Poor Miss Amanda! Maybe if they'd just try to look up and look for brighter things they'd get over being mad and be happy again."

When Uncle Joe and Carolyn May returned from this adventurous walk, Mr. Staggs went directly into his own room, closed the door and even locked it. He went over to the old-fashioned walnut bureau that stood against the wall between the two windows and stood before it for some moments in an attitude of deep reflection. Finally, he drew his bunch of keys from his pocket and opened one of the two small drawers in the heavy piece of furniture—the only locked drawer there was. He drew forth a tintype picture, faded now, but clear enough to show him the features of the two individuals pictured on the sensitized plate.

His own eyes looked out of the photograph proudly. They were much younger eyes than they were now.

And the girl beside him in the picture! Sweet as a wild rose, Mandy Parlow's lovely, calm countenance promised all the beauty and dignity her matured womanhood had achieved.

"Mandy! Mandy!" he murmured over and over again. "Oh, Mandy! Why? Why?"

He held the tintype for a long, long time in his hand, gazing on it with eyes that saw the vanished years rather than the portraits themselves. Finally he hid the picture away again, closed and locked the drawer with a sigh and with slow steps left the room.

GREAT ORDNANCE BASE ESTABLISHED BY AMERICAN FORCES EMPLOYED IN FRANCE

A great ordinance base has been established by the American forces in France. Several thousand men are employed there in the various departments. The picture shows the reception park and workshop of the motor mechanics' division of the quartermaster corps.

SUBSTITUTES TO SAVE ESSENTIALS

Automobile Makers Are Urged to Exercise Greatest Care in Selecting Materials.

STRAIN IN LEATHER SUPPLY

Tests Have Repeatedly Shown That Tensile Strength Is Greater Than Real Article—Are Not Affected by Weather.

Manufacturers of motorcars can effect a considerable saving in material if reasonable care is exercised in the selection of substitutes, according to Fred K. Parke, president of a Michigan motor concern. As one of the first and most important steps in this direction, Mr. Parke suggests the use of substitute leather for upholstery in passenger cars and trucks.

"Automobile manufacturers will go a long way toward meeting the government half way in its efforts to keep the industry going by the use of substitute leather," says Mr. Parke. "In addition to the tremendous amount of leather being used by our government for harness, saddles, shoes and a hundred other things, the allied governments are laying plans to buy leather in the American markets for use of the armies in France in a very short time. The British government purchased a large amount of leather last year and consumed almost the entire supply of some grades."

Leather Supply Strained.

"Shoe factories also will be busy making shoes for General Pershing's army, as the war department plans to call for a million and a half each month. This means that the country's source of leather supply will be strained to the limit."

Mr. Parke has made a complete investigation of the possibilities of substitute leather and has come to the conclusion that for most purposes, it should give as much or more satisfaction than the best leather. Tests have repeatedly shown that the tensile strength is greater and that it will far outlast real leather. Substitute leathers are usually made of a waterproof material and are not affected by weather as is leather. For this reason, the war department has specified uses, such as truck covers, ambulance upholstery, sweat bands in steel helmets, leggings, waterproof coats and ponchos.

No Saving in Substitute.

The automobile manufacturers will not save any money in using the substitute leather. It will cost him as much as some grades of leather that have been universally used during the last few years.

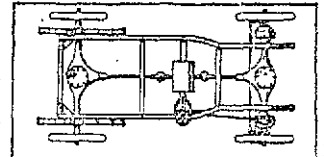

"I believe automobile buyers will readily co-operate if all automobile manufacturers will adopt the substitute leather as a patriotic move," says Mr. Parke. "I have discussed the subject with a great many dealers during the last week and all have expressed their enthusiastic willingness to co-operate."

"These same dealers have since written me that owners to whom they have talked declare that they will be glad to accept their cars, whether they be expensive twelve-cylinder cars or light medium-priced cars, upholstered with substitute leather. It is up to every one of us to work with the government at this time, and I believe the automobile industry can do much by taking action in this matter at once."

PLAY IN SHAFT IS OVERCOME

Spring End Bearings Placed at Each End Solve Problem—Vibration Is Eliminated.

The drive shaft on an automobile was provided with universal joints that permitted a free longitudinal motion of the shaft, this occurring when the car was fully loaded. After a little while the inner portion of the joint housing became slightly worn, and it was not long before the shaft was sliding back and forth continuously. A spring was placed at each end of the shaft, as shown in the sketch, and this solved the problem, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The shaft thus continually floats between the two springs, and the rear joint housing is the only part that moves when the car is loaded. Vibration is wholly eliminated.

AUTOMOBILE INDUSTRY IS HIT

Estimated That at Least 60,000 Men Are Now in Service, Wearing Khaki or Blue.

It is estimated that at least 60,000 men who were employed in the automobile and allied industries at this time last year are now in the service of Uncle Sam, either wearing the khaki and blue of the army and navy or engaged in the production of war material and military equipment. The department of labor says the automobile and allied trades has lost a higher percentage of employees than any other industry. The decrease in the number of workers in January was more than one-tenth of the total number employed during the previous month, according to the statement quoted.

TO REMEDY VALVE TROUBLES

Where Proper Opening Is Lost on Account of Constant Hammering Drill Hole in Stem.

It frequently happens that the valves become short in the stem from constant hammering and if the tappets are not adjustable, proper valve opening is lost. To remedy this condition drill a small hole up the valve stem and file a steel peg that may be driven tightly into this hole. Drill and countersink a hole through a piece of steel strip and rivet it into the stem by means of the projecting bit of steel pin. Trim off the job with a file. Another way to the same end is to drill and tap a small hole up the stem and screw in it a small steel bolt.

DIAGRAM OF WIRING SYSTEM

Without Chart New Car Owner May Find Himself in Difficulty With Electric Apparatus.

It may not be out of order to suggest to the new car owner that one of the "tools" that should always be carried in the car is the chart of the wiring system. Without this he may find himself in difficulties with the electric system that will be almost impossible to locate.

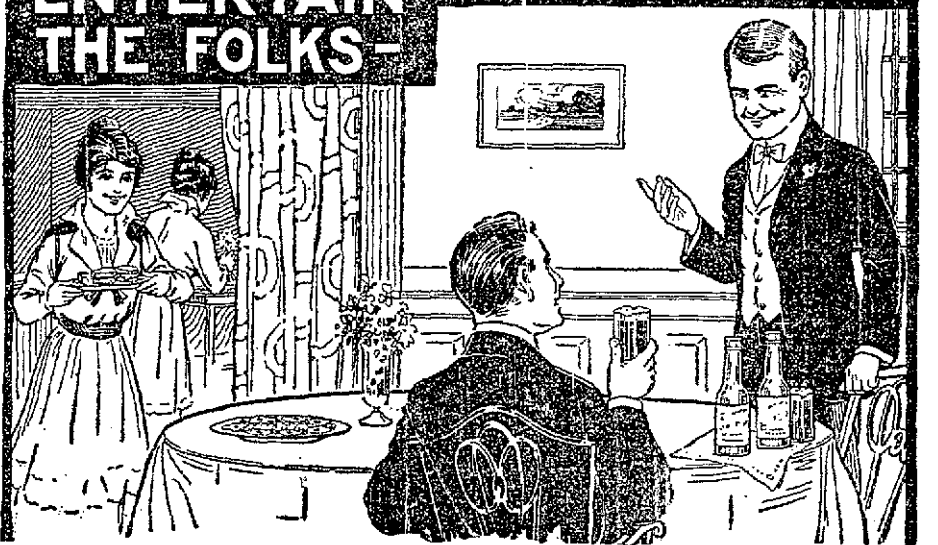

To Prevent Skidding.

Unequally adjusted rear-wheel brakes are a potent cause of skidding and it is wise to make frequent tests of the parts for incorrect adjustment. It is necessary to have some one with you to watch the wheels. Drive the car along a dry road, accelerate quickly and then suddenly apply the brakes. If one wheel slides while the other is revolving, it may be taken for granted that the brakes are not holding with equal effectiveness.

Wire Wheel Inspection.

Wire wheels are usually installed over false hubs and locked in position by lock nuts. It is advisable to inspect these lock nuts frequently and tighten same. If wheel becomes loose on the false hub it will crank and in time injure the springs.

Special to The Courier.

SCOTTSVILLE, Aug. 6.—Another contingent of draftees from District No. 7 left this morning for Camp Wadsworth, S. C. Those in the call were Mahlon C. Love, Scottsdale; Joseph Guidas, Hunter; Charles F. Tedrow, Scottsdale; Clyde E. Comp, Scottsdale; Charles G. Frick, Scottsdale and William C. Mosch of Tarr. It had been arranged for the men to board a special train that should have come into Mount Pleasant, but A. L. Porter, chief clerk of the board, had to arrange other means of transportation at the last minute. Boxes were packed by the committee in charge of Mrs. Kate Livingston.

Letters and cards have been coming in steadily thanking the ladies' committee of the auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. not only for the dinners served but for the splendid boxes packed for them. Sherman Felgar said: "We surely thank the ladies for those lunch boxes. They were the best on the train." Others gone before these boys have been just as grateful in their thanks.

Instruction Board Named.
In compliance with the instructions from Provost Marshal General Crowder, B. H. Boyd, chairman of Local Board No. 7, has appointed Charles D. Flagle, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A., as chairman of the military instruction board for this community. Mr. Flagle has chosen as assistant Bert Ellis, who was a lieutenant in the Spanish war, and William Mullen Miller and Joseph Knowles. They may choose others they may wish that will bring their committee up to five. For the bureau of information the Y. M. C. A. will be headquarters with J. Alex. Yahner representing the Knights of Columbus and Ben Meiman the Young Men's Hebrew association. While the military training will be optional with the men in Class 1 each one is urged by the draft board for his own personal benefit to take up the work which will be at convenient hours for nearly all. A special group will be formed later of older and younger men who desire this training.

We Have Bought
At public sale part of a $20,000 stock of new quality merchandise from a well known and reputable Pittsburgh firm in bankruptcy. Mr. Bendiner's long association with the wholesale and manufacturing end of the ladies' and children's ready-to-wear business has made this possible. He was given the first opportunity at this wonderful stock by the leading creditors, who wanted cash and wanted it quick. The "story in a nutshell." The creditors wanting an out of town concern to sell this merchandise called us on the phone Monday, July 22. Tuesday after a personal inspection of the stock, we offered a very ridiculously low price, knowing the season was well advanced. Wednesday our offer was accepted, Friday the entire stock was on its way to our store. Monday it arrived and we have worked every hour since assorting and cutting prices to mere nothing in order to have it in readiness for this sale. This phenomenal merchandising even started Friday, August 2, at 9 A. M. and last for ten days only. Frerday Ladies' Store, William Bendiner, proprietor. As you get off the car, Scottsdale, Pa.—Adv.

WIDOW PREFERRED TO MEET DEATH AT HOME

"For many years I suffered from stomach trouble. All the doctors I tried helped me but little. All said I would have to go to hospital and be operated on for gall stones or I would not live much longer. I told them I preferred to meet death at home. One day I picked up an advertisement of May's Wonderful Remedy and since taking a course of it more than year ago have not had a single pain in my stomach, have good appetite and can eat anything." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. The Edison Tone

Test is a Proof—Not an Argument

It's positive proof of our claim that Thomas A. Edison has perfected an instrument which Re-Creates the human voice with such fidelity that no one can distinguish between the singer and the instrument. Yes, it sounds incredible. But before audiences totaling more than 2,000,000 people, great artists—Metropolitan stars—have sung in direct comparison with the New Edison and defied the audience to detect any difference. With the lights lowered to hide the singer's lips, not one listener has been able to say when the artist ceased and the instrument continued alone.

The NEW EDISON

WARNING—Edison Re-Creations should not be played and cannot be played properly on any other instrument. If they could be, the manufacturers who seek to profit by Mr. Edison's research work would be able to make tone test comparisons, such as Edison has made with the New Edison before two million music lovers.
